

Radiation is the lifelong music project of New Albany native Andrew N. Aebersold.

The new album, Project 2022, is heavily influenced by 80s, 90s, and early 2000s sounds with a modern twist. Songs combine a mixture of guitars, synthesizers, pianos, and traditional orchestral instruments to create something new yet familiar.

Radiation has been creating music since the mid-nineties, previously catering to the electronic music scene. The new album represents an evolutionary leap. Radiation now shifts its style to one with alternative and electronic rock elements. His instrumentation blurs the lines between what is tangible and what is not. The music evokes mature angst on a magnificent scale, with just the right amount of human emotion to distance himself from his old contemporaries and what some may consider robotic. Heavy beats with epic, climactic hooks with guitar riffs ensure what is happening in your ears is more than a mere dance party; it's an authentic musical experience with a human touch.
